B&M reveals how to make chocolate Baileys cheesecake at home and it looks DELICIOUS All I. asked • 02/28/13 please tell me the steps to solve this! i seriously appreciate your help!! 2 Answers By Expert Tutors Katherine P. answered • 02/28/13 Positive, Effective, and Experienced Math Tutor The key to problems like these are to: Identify the elements: dollars, wrappers, chocolates Identify (and remember!) the goal: changing dollars and wrappers into chocolates You can write each element in terms of your goal (chocolate). dollars ($1 = 1 chocolate) sets of wrappers (3 wrappers = 1 chocolate) Now work on the goal - change those dollars and wrappers into chocolate. After each calculation you make, check your balance - how many dollars and how many wrappers are left? Balance: 15 dollars, 0 wrappers, 0 chocolates Change dollars into chocolate and wrappers Spend 15 dollars, Get 15 chocolates, 15 wrappers New balance: 0 dollars, 15 wrappers, 15 chocolates Change wrappers into chocolates and wrappers Spend 15 wrappers, Get 5 chocolates and 5 wrappers New balance: 0 dollars, 5 wrappers, 20 chocolates Change wrappers into chocolates and wrappers Spend 3 wrappers, Get 1 chocolate and 1 wrapper New balance: 0 dollars, 3 wrappers, 21 chocolates Change wrappers into chocolates and wrappers Spend 3 wrappers, Get 1 chocolate and 1 wrapper New balance: 0 dollars, 1 wrappers, 22 chocolates Can you buy any more chocolates? Not with 0 dollars and less than 3 wrappers, so you know you're done! Final Answer: 22 chocolates If you found this explanation helpful, please click the "vote up" thumbs up button. :) Katherine P. $1 buys 1 Chocolate, so $15 buys 15 Chocolates. 15 Chocolates provides 15 wrappers, but it takes 3 wrappers to buy 1 chocolate. 15/3 = 5 chocolates you can buy from your original 15 chocolates Now you have 5 new wrappers 5/3 = 1.66, so you can buy 1 more chocolate. So lets add it all up. 15 chocolates + 5 chocolates + 1 chocolate = 21 chocolates from your original $15
