Goemon is a 13th generation descendant of the samurai renegade Ishikawa Goemon. He is famous for a reticent personality coupled with apparent unlimited skill in martial arts and Ryusei sword, known in the anime as Zantetsuken. Partner of Arsène Lupin III and Daisuke Jigen, tends to join their businesses only when interested. The Goemon of Creation is unique to the series as it was the only character not there from the beginning. Monkey Punch stated that, as none of the existing cast seemed particularly Asian, he added Goemon as a "very traditional Japanese male character" to balance the manga. [2] As such, Goemon was mainly based on the character Kyūzō, the swordsman of 1954 Akira KurosawaSeven Samurai; from the role came the rigid demeanor and fast drawing blade of Goemon, as well as the long count face of the actor Seiji Miyaguchi. Description In the original manga, Goemon appears for the first time as a very dangerous enemy of Lupin in chapter 28 "Goemon's Appearance" (J. Goemon Tōjō). Lupin tries to steal the alchemy formula of Goemon's master for impervious swords through the infiltration of the Goemon clan, but his cover is blown by Fujiko Mine, who is Goemon's fiancée at the time. Goemon tries to kill Lupin for the next several rations, making attempts ranging from hiring killers as skilled as Daisuke Jigen himself, to enter the service of three masters of martial arts, to place bombs in the properties of Lupin. However, he later decided to learn more about working for Lupin than against him, and rather abruptly changes his loyalty. His position on Lupin's side is cemented when Lupin ruins the government case against the man who killed Goemon's uncle, allowing Goemon to avenge brutally and publicly as he wants without having to enter prison to do so. For the events of the second series of manga, Lupin implicitly trusts Goemon, and Goemon reciprocates. When a rival of Lupin's captures and torture horribly Goemon, Goemon refuses to answer his questioning, except to say that Lupin would find him and would allow him to get revenge. Lupin then captures and seduces his rival's wife, and uses the information collected to save Goemon, who kills his kidnapper with the help of Jigen. In the original relationship of the anime Goemon with Lupin begins more professional than a close friendship. From the second anime series, Goemon has developed a true loyalty to Lupin. However, it is easily annoyed by Lupin antics, especially Lupin infatuation with women and Fujiko Mine in particular. From time to time he will oppose Lupin directly when the works or actions of Lupin do not agree with his morale. He also promised that the last act he'll take with Lupin is delivering his deathblow. Yet Goemon does not hesitate to help Lupin in serious situations, and assists him promptly whenever Lupin works for a just cause. However, in 1978, The Mystery of Mamo, claims to help Lupin simply so as to keep his vow to kill him. Goemon has a much more friendly relationship with Jigen. Goemon sees Jigen as an honorable warrior companion, while Jigen sees Goemon as a trusted "foxhole friend", and the two are often coupled together during the work, and usually help keep Lupin in control. On a strange occasion and more and more in recent years, Goemon will train with Fujiko, despite his distrust. Personality A master of a series of classical Japanese martial arts, Goemon excels at Kenjutsu and Battōjutsu. Using hisZantetsuken sword (carried into an unloved shirasaya without a guard) has the ability to cut virtually any substance, even flying bullets, steelcars, and multi-storey buildings. Its formation includes jujutsu, Aikido and Karate, which allow to vanquishing with bare hands of different attackers simultaneously with a minimal effort. Despite his invincible weapon and his martial arts experience, Goemon prefers to incapable rather than kill opponents, usually destroying their weapons and clothes with quick lightning swept of his sword. Since katanas traditionally must cut meat before being returned to the scam, Goemon reacts to his non-lethal use of Zantetsuken exclaiming "Mata tsumaranu mono or kitte shimatta" (in English dubs, "Once again, I cut an unworthy object [indeed].") Goemon has an extreme sense of pride in his abilities, and when he feels shame. Rompere Zantetsuken, as he did in a battle with Finch in the Mystery of Mamo, is a common cause of shame. She will also feel pilgrim when she succumbs to her weaknesses, as when a woman races with her sword in Flame Memories: Tokyo crisis. On many of these ocasions, Goemon will start to meditate or form further to free himself of his weaknesses. Goemon as seen in episode 0: The First ContactGoemon shows loyalty to Japanese culture as strictly as its travel lifestyle and unique can allow. Dresses in a hakama and fundoshi, and prefers to wear her long hair and a little also cut. He eats only Japanese cuisine, willing to fast rather than settle for any Western choice. He is a solid believer in Buddhism and Shinto. Even if you can drink champagne, your choice drink is love. Sometimes it was seen smoking a kiseru and usually wears a Sugegasa style hat. While Goemon is traditionally fearless in battle, it shows a shy boia when confronting attractive women. His reaction to the vision of a woman in fluted clothing is making her look and blur; This embarrassment is typically performed even when in the company of women has romantic interest in, such as Murasaki Suminawa, her boyfriend in The Plot of the Fuma Clan. Goemon's most often seen pastime is meditation. Even under threat or when it is locked up, it is usually sitting on the floor in such a deep state of mental isolation that can not be sprouted from its position. Other Goemon activities include fishing, attending the noh theatre, listening to enka jazz and participating in martial arts competitions. Although usually a person of aloofness mellow, Goemon was seen to explode with frustration, as well as admiring beautiful women and (very rarely) screaming in fear. Such moments out of character are usually treated as humorous. If Goemon has a real weakness, he's an idiot for women. Easily trust anything that seems superficially trusted or innocent, often landing in many troubles. At the same time, she fears sulphite women will distract him from his formation, and tends to blur or escape when a woman puts him in a situation less than modest. goemon also is very bad badmoneey and fall into any scam that states point the way to enlightenment, and constantly charge Lupin for his services in some way. In $1 Money Wars he gives it to the female leader of a cult, who immediately leaves with it. Commonly thought to be just a samurai, an episode of the second television series ("Goemonās Revenge") shows Goemon visiting his sensei Iga ninja. This episode describes him as a ninja master, perhaps giving some reason for his desire to find theft an acceptable practice, despite his samurai ways. Voice actors Goemon Ishikawa were first voiced by Gorō34 Naya in the CinemaScope version of the 1969 pilot film for the first anime, while Osamu Kobayashi played it in the pilot's television version.[3] However, Naya wanted to be Zenigata because she had more lines, so did their wheels. They were exchanged; Chikao Ā czotsuka received the role when the first anime was actually produced (1971).[4] Goemon was taken over by Makio Inoue for the second anime (1977), who continued to sing the character until 2010, with one exception. Due to budget problems, TMS decided not to use the regular voice for the original 1987 animation The Fuma Conspiracy,[5] with Goemon voiced by Kaneto Shiozawa. The 2011 TV special Blood Seal à Eternal Sirmaid marked the first appearance of Daisuke Namikawa as a character and continues to give voice to Goemon Ishikawa to this day.[6] Inoue returned to the role once again for the original short video animation of Lupin Family Lineup 2012.[7] William Ross played Goemon in the film, 1979 English dub of The Mystery of Mamo, where his name was changed to "Samurai". Ross founded Frontier Enterprises, the studio that produced dub under his direction.[8] Other performers include Steve Kramer (1992-3, Streamline), Mark Franklin (1995, AnimEigo), Ardwright Chamberlain (1995, Streamline), Garrick Hagon (1996, Manga UK) and Michael Gregory (2000, Animaze/Manga). Mike McFarland played the character for the dubbing of several television specials and theatrical films between 2002 and 2005, and for their 2013 dubbing of "The Woman Called Fujiko Mine"[9]. Lex Lang voiced Goemon in Phnuuz's dub for the second anime release by Pioneer/Geneon between 2003 and 2006, and resumed the role for the fifth and sixth anime dub by Discotek Media and for Goemon Ishikawa's Spray of Blood.[10] Live actor In 2014 the movie Lupin the Third saw TV star and movie star GÅ IĪ Ayano as the first Goemon live-action. Originally it was arranged to present the Goemon shot in contemporary jacket and tie with director RyĀĀ"hei Kitamura who expressed "it would be absurd for Goemon to exist in today's society wearing samurai clothes and carrying around a katana." The idea was discarded and the finished film shows GĀ IĪ Ayano as a swordsman wearing clothes similar to his drawn and animated colleagues. Reception In 2007, the magazine Oricon interviewed readers which characters would most like to see in their series. [11] Goemon appeared in position number eight on female reader surveys, and seventh in the combined survey. "Lupin World ¼ nothing∨ENETWORK" (in Japanese). Lupin the third network.
